Control of China at Stake in Approaching Crisis in Military Action

Campaign Against Forces of Nanking Being Waged on Two Long Fronts

BY RADIO TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITO SHANGHAI-The Chinese military situation is rapidly approaching a crisis, as government troops and the rebels, headed by Gen. Feng Yuhsiang, battle on two long fronts in Honan and Hupeh with control of China at stake. The fighting has been unfavorable to the Government forces, who, although holding their own along the Peiping, Hankow and Lunghai railways, has been forced back by the rebel military drive down the Han River, which has given the Kuominchun possession of several strategic points north of Hupeh and carries the threat perilously near Hankow, which is the immediate rebel objective. Rebel pressure on this sector has compelled the Government to evacu-ate Siangyang, an important strategic point, but all available forces have been rushed from Hankow to stem the advance and Government troops are concentrated for decisive repulse of this threat, for if the Kuominchun is able to achieve a decisive victory the Government will be embarrassed by the defection of so-called inde-

Meanwhile, President Chiang Kaishek remains at the front in personal command of the troops, and considerable importance is attached to his conference with Finance Minister conference with Finance Minister

CHANG TO NEGOTIATE ON RAILROAD ISSUE

TOKYO (A)-Reports have been received from Mukden that Chang Hsueh-liang, Governor of Manchuria, has decided to negotiate with the Soviet Government for settlement of the Chinese Eastern Railway dispute independently of the Nanking Nationalist Government.

The reports said Dr. Wellington

Koo, one-time Chinese Foreign Min-ister and Minister to the United States, has been appointed his plenipotentiary for this purpose.

The reasons for the decision are believed to be the continued pressure of the Soviet military forces on the Manchurian frontier, combined with the belief that the Nationalist Government has been suffering a setback in southern China.

vocational education and curricula of a more practical nature.

The shorter working week will have a direct effect on education, Dr. Cooper said, and will make it necessary for the schools to provide fa-cilities for a new type of student. Men and women now engaged in business and industry, he declared, will seek educational improvements they did not obtain earlier in life and will turn to the junior colleges of the country for this training.

FORD LAYS DROP IN STOCKS TO TRADE DECLINE

Advocates High Wage Scale With Low Prices to Expand Buying Power

LAUDS WISE COUNSEL OF OLDER EXECUTIVES

Declares Business Men Must Get Back to Work and Stop Market Dealings

WASHINGTON (P)—Henry Ford said, after leaving a conference of business men called by the President, that the first thing to do was "to correct the impression that the present condition of affairs is due to the stock market."

"Collapse of speculation may have been the occasion of a business hesitation," Mr. Ford continued, "but it certainly was not the cause.

"The stock market does not make prosperity but prosperity is absolutely essential to such an inflation of values as we have seen during the past year. When an inflated stock market breaks, it does not necessarily carry general business down with it, but when general business declines it invariably deflates the artificial values of the stock market.

"That is what happened. It was only the temporary diversion of business men's attention that prevented them from seeing what was happening. It is now clear to all that the real explanation of the present situation is not to be found in recent stock market history but in recent business history."

If the public understands, the nanufacturer said, that the stock market cannot permanently affect us for either good or bad, "the way is clear to constructive views." He added that business showed some decline, even while speculative values were at their height. Men Drawn From Work "The reasons are plain," he said. "First, there was a serious with-drawal of brains from business. Men who otherwise have been working out better designs for comm quist of Minneapolis to be an Assistant Attorney-General in charge of and planning to put more value into prohibition enforcement, succeeding their products were drawn off from Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, was the work they were best fitted to do by the promise of quick profits in speculation. # Affords Rendezvous OF AUSTRIAN

NEW YORK—Like pioneers of frontier days who went to a trading post to replenish their supplies and exchange news, 50,000 Boy Scouts of the metropolitan district have such a rustic rendezvous in mid-town Manhattan. The Boy Scout Trading Post at 20 East Thirty-third Street the official headquarters for Boy Scout equipment, has transplanted the atmosphere of the frontier to busy New York.

Inside the trading post there is the real Scouting atmosphert of the outdoors. The post has just been re-modeled, but instead of being modernized it has been made still more rustic. Its walls are of logs, still bearing their bark, and its rafters are rough-hewn beams. Its counters and cases and shelves are finished with real hickory, and there are tables and chairs just like the frontiersmen used, brought from the American headquarters at the recent world jamboree at Birkenhead, Eng. Here, after school and on Satur days, Scouts come from Westchester and Long Island and New Jersey to see the latest equipment, and behind

Chancellor Makes Concessions on Question of Constitutional Reforms

BY RADIO TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITO VIENNA-Informed circles here are of the opinion that the prospects for a calm parliamentary settlement of the constitutional reforms question are surprisingly goo

It was expected that the proposed bill of reforms upon which the special constitution committee had been working for the last few weeks would be introduced at once. Parliament however, has only received an an-nouncement from the Chancellor, Johann Schober, that it will first be necessary to resummon the commit tee to consider new formulations and proposals presented by the Opposi-tion party and that the new bill will presented during the next few

This postponement has been opti mistically received because it is regarded as a further step toward con-cessions to the viewpoint of the Social Democratic Opposition, following upon meetings of the government parties, the Christian Socialists, the Pan-Germans and the Agrarians, at which Herr Schober's activities in the matter of the constitution were unanimously accepted.

The importance of this fact is that the Fascist wing of the Christian

Under the direction of the Presi dent a comprehensive survey is also being made for consolidating within The construction of an aeronautic the Department of Justice most of the agencies dealing with prohibition enforcement and a recommendation along that line also will be made to Congress in the President's message. This would bring about a transfer of the prohibition bureau from the Treasury to the Justice Department and the concentration in that department of other enforcement work. The whole work after the transfer would be under the single direction of G. Aaron Youngquist, Assistant Attorney-General. Reorganization of the Government has been a work the President has long been intimately connected with and one in which he is deeply inter-ested. He stressed the matter in the course of his campaign and has been at work with practical plans on the question since taking office.

The suggested national industrial. banking and business board would be in the nature of an economic board of strategy to maintain a country-wide system of economic co-operation for the purpose as expressed by the President of preserving "balanced prosperity." Plans along this line are dependent upon the outcome of the current situation.

Discount Rate Lowered From the banking and transportation groups with whom the President has already conferred, and who have pledged him their whole-hearted co-operation, is already forthcoming tangible proof of their assurances. The Federal Reserve Board announced that in the Boston district it had obtained a reduction of the rediscount rate from 5 to 41/2 per cent, and from railroad officials word reached the President that they were prepared to practically double their construction and building budgets for the coming year.

It was stated that the railroad executives at the annual convention of their organization, the American Railroad Executives' Association, in Chicago Nov. 22, will evidence their practical support of the President by formally agreeing to materially increase the building programs. Last year, according to the Interstate Commerce Commission, the carriers spent $453,000,000 for improvements and new equipment. For the coming year they propose to bring this figure close to the billion dollar mark. With the Boston Federal Reserve Bank following the lead of the New

1 1 1 Brown Shoe Co. By JOHN A. BUSH President

Responding to your telegram of the 14th, the outlook in the shoe business is somewhat different than the outlook in some other lines. The situation in stocks of leather on hand is radically different than in 1921 and 1922, at the time of the last stock market crash. At that time there were in the hands of tanners 10,974,000 pieces of sole leather. Today there are 2,453,000, which is less than a six weeks' supply, and in the hands of tanners, dealers, and manufacturers but 3,278,577 pieces. as compared with 14,189,000 pieces.

at the peak in April, 1922. For some time tanners have not been working in many hides, which means that for several months there will not be much finished leather coming through While there has been an increase in the number of pairs of shoes produced during 1929, considering the increase in population and the smaller production of the two years previous, it is not excessive. I believe there are no burdensome stocks of desirable shoes on the shelves of merchants, jobbers, or manufacturers. In a few words, the shoe and leather industries had their big deflation some years ago, and a minor deflation less than a year ago, and prices of hides, leather and shoes are in a strong position. Shoes have been sold during this year on the basis of hide prices at the beginning of 1929, not at the prices that hides have been selling for during the should decline several cents per pound in order to be in keeping with shoe prices now prevailing. To say that financial conditions will not affect consumer demand would be foolish, but with a small curtailment all round on the part of the manufacturers, and hides, leather and shoe stocks in a healthy condition, our industry faces 1930 in a strong position. Our own company has always manufactured popular priced shoes of good quality and will continue to do so. The year 1929 was one of the best years in our history, and in number of pairs manufactured our largest year. We manufactured and sold more pairs of shoes the six months ended Oct. 31 than in a whole year during the big war years, 1918 to 1921, inclusive. We look forward to the coming year with confidence, believing that the United States is fundamentally sound and that with inflated values brought down to bedrock figures and money rates reduced so that municipal and private building can again be resumed, we should within a short while get back to work and in a normal way continue the world's progress, in which the United States is bound to be a leader.

Last, but not least, the shoe business has the advantage that popular priced shoes are bound to worn, and the large low-cost producers must supply the de-

Although before Varela's day Uruguay went through some 20 civil wars in 40 years, the generation that followed Varela only suffered one and ever since then domestic peace has remained undisturbed.

Obstacle of Public Opinion hard battle against popular opinion, attacking it through the press. From his university chair, from his political party, he never ceased repeating his favorite slogans: "Education Destroys the Evils of Ignorance," "Education Increases One's Fortune," "Education Lessens Crime and Vice," "Education Augments Happiness, Success and the Strength of Nations," and "Instruction Is the Great Leveler of Our Age," Varela took as an example the United States of America, extolling the greatness cultival crops are wheat, barley, oats, corn and flax, but the chief source of Uruguay's agricultural wealth is not in these products of cultivation, but rather in her immense herds of cattle and sheep. Here lies the prosperity of the country.

The rapid development of this industry may be attributed to favorable geographical conditions, the small total population as compared with which education had won for the prosperous Republic of the North, where this tireless reformer had once spent some time. Very bitter was the battle which Varela waged against his contemporaries, but in the end he conquered.

When once the country was at peace, and the masses educated, all the economic questions, the social problems and even those of political unrest, gradually solved themselves, and domestic stability soon permitted the Nation to try out the great reforms of more advanced states. To-day it may be affirmed that the dream which Varela thus described has been realized: "It is a dream, perhaps, which makes us see our in the future, though small in population and even in territory. narching at the forefront of the naions which speak our mother tongue, a position won through her instruction, her wisdom, her industry." This, in fact, is the place now held in South America by that little Republic whose area is scarcely equal to that of Oklahoma, and whose inhabitants number no more

EMPORTANT AID FOR FARMER IN MARKETING ACT

Will Provide Distribution System Comparable to That of Industry

BRECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITO OMAHA, Neb.—The Federal Farm Board has a large order to fill, but if the provisions of the Agricuttural Marketing Act are put properly into effect, it will enable agriculture, the Nation's basic industry, to rise to the levels of economic equality and independence that are enjoyed by other branches of industry and organized labor, declared Samuel R. McKelvie, Lincoln, Neb., member of the board, before the National Farmers' Union, in convention here.

"As a producer, the American farmer is the most efficient in the world," he said, "but his system of distribution has not compared in efficiency with that of organized in-dustry or labor. It is this that the Federal Farm Board is charged with helping to improve and we feel that progress is being made."

It is not the intent of the Agricultural Marketing Act nor of the board to fix prices, he stated. "As a matter of sound agricultural policy, it would be a mistake to undertake to do this rond the range of natural laws,' he said. "But it is our purpose to maintain a level of prices for agricultural commodities consistent with supply and demand and to see that the farmer is relieved from the grain at a price determined only by natural conditions.

Call "Bolero" a drum concerto, or call it anything else, success must await it wherever played, the same kind of success that has attended the composer's "Valse." #### HENRY GEORGE PLAN THRIVES AT MOBILE BAY

Oldest Single Tax Colony in Alabama Becomes Popular Seaside Resort

How the single tax theory expounded by Henry George is being put into practice in the United States, in several "islands" of economic rent, is shown in a series of four articles, of which this is the

AL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR FAIRHOPE, Ala.-Oldest and largest of the enclaves of economic rent is that of Fairhope, Ala., where, since 1895, a single tax experiment has been demonstrating the possibility of applying the Georgian theory without conflicting with multi-taxic laws. This pioneering venture has developed to such proportions that today Fairhope is conspicuous among the intensive enclaves in the United States, and probably more than any other is cited as a concrete example of the practical idealism to which Single Taxers are devoted.

So eager, in fact, is the Single Tax Corporation of Fairhope to obviate any possible misunderstanding of its policy that for years it has carried a sign on the seaward front of its wharf warehouse to be seen by steamer passengers, It reads:

"Fairhope Single Tax Colony, Land

manufacturing, free of purchase price. No speculation for you or any-

The town is about 14 miles from the city of Mobile, on Mobile Bay. It had its inception at Des Moines, Ia., in 1893, when a group of Single Taxers voted to acquire land and test the tenability of Henry George's ideas. It was joined by parties from several other states. A membership fee, at first $200, soon reduced to $100, provided funds for initial expenses.

Old-Fashioned Pioneering "There was pioneering of the old-fashioned sort," said Ernest B. Gas-ton, joint publisher of the Fairhope along the eastern shore of the bay, with not a town of any size nearesthan Mobile, across the bay. The ground was covered with timber of little value. It was not naturally fertile. The settlers were all poor. Most of them were unfamiliar with farming and there were no established indus-tries to give employment. The participants were mostly strangers to one another. The usual differences prevailed and friction over questions of leadership developed. Many came and went away again, but a nucleus imbued with faith and courage remained."

At one time the Gaston family was At one time the Gaston family was the only family of the original band living in the colony. The little band had sought the opportunity to prac-tice freely their faith, like the Pilgrim Fathers and like the Pilgrim Fathers they encountered difficulties.

"Today the community is one of the most progressive to be found anywhere, except where large sums-of money have been spent on pre-arranged plans," said Mr. Gaston. Pepulation of 1500

With the compression ratio appearing to have reached its practical limit, the chief method of increasing horsepower has been by the enlargement of bores. Among the cars using this plan of increasing power are six of the leading American makes with a wide variety of models, ranging in price from $1000 to $4000.

In line with the predictions made last spring, the eight-cylinder en-gines have become popular in every class for 1930. The plan of developing additional models, largely from existing parts, is being adopted generally in the industry. These cars, intermediate in size between the usual standard models, are also intermediate in

One of the best known American manufacturers has adopted the down-draft carburetor, in which the air enters at the top and the mixture leaves at the bottom, following a downward course from there on. The advantage of this system is that it follows the natural course of passage rather than to depend on forced draft to carry the fuel along after leaving the spray nozzle.

Simplicity is the engineering keynote on the new cars. In line with this idea the starter button has been removed from the foot board- and placed on the instrument panel or

The original idea in placing the button on the foot board, some distance to the right of the accelerator pedal, was to shorten the length of the starter cable as much as pos-sible. Shorter starting cables reduce the voltage drop, sharpening up the flow of starter current and sending more quickly the most possible power into action. Keeping the button un-der hand control means that the possibility of blindly starting the car is done away with almost altogether.

In the announcements of cars for the coming year the most universal adoption along continental lines is the use of four-speed transmission with the third speed noiseless. Some makers have built into their cars a three-speed transmission with the second speed silent.

NEW YORK — University Club climbed up into the lead once more in the metropolitan Class A squash racquets team championship Wednesday, when it scored its third successive victory in the series, defeating the team of Nassau Country Club on the University Club courts, 4 to 1. This was the first appearance of the Glen Cove team in the series, as their preceding match, against Rockaway Hunting Club, was postponed.

Prominent tennis players made up the greater part of the Nassau team, including J. J. McCloy, Harry Brunle and Hunt T. Dickinson. Brunie scored the only victory for the losers, while the other two also showed good squash in their matches. Darwin P. Kingsley Jr., the University Club champion, made his first appearance of the season, but was hardly up to his best form, dropping the first game to McCloy. The summary:

Walter Berger, recently secured by the Boston National League Baseball Club from Los Angeles of the Facific Coast League, seems to have a very promising record by which to step into the major leagues. He is young, very fast and an excellent fielder. During 1928 he batted 327 and hit 20 home runs despite the fact that a mishap kept him out of the game the final six weeks of the season. In the 1929 race Berger finished with a batting mark of .335 and hit 40 home runs. He was about fifth in the league in the matter of runs-batted-in.

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITO

Moscow. Jaa. — Championship in the Pacific Coast Conference will be decided at Pailo Alto this Saturday when University of California, undefeated, meets Stunford University, once defeated. This is their traditional biggame. No matter which whis them which make a champion, but must be a champion but must be a champion and one lost $33; and California, four and one, $00. U. S. C. would get the title by .024 per cent.

On a comparative basis the Bears are stronger. Coach H. H. Jones of Southern California said California, that the best team he had seen since coming west. California, it is strue, caught the Trojans in a let-down the week after the difficult Stanford game, a recount of other Golden Bear achievements, however, shows their power.

California, crossed the continent early in the season and defeated Pennsylvania, 12 to 7. came back and defeated the powerful Olympic Club team, 21 to 19, the next Saturday. The Bear 53-to-18 victory over Montana conclusively proved that California has backfield talent.

California has an excellent line, its strong points being Capt. R. M. Riegels 20, center, H. M. Gill '30, and L. R. Pitto '30, guards, and R. G. Avery '31, and E. L. Thornton '31, ends. The big gun in the Golden Bear backfield is Ben Lom '30, halfback. California had earned perhaps the hardest victory of the year. Eisan caught a pass from Baturday. Outcharged by the battling Huskies, California won by a speedy aerial thrust in the final quarter. John Geehan '30, Husky quarter, fumbled on California's 38-yard line and R. A. Gill '22, Bear fullback, recovered. Four plays later, two of them passes from Ben Lom '30 to L. G. Eisan '30, quarterback, California had earned perhaps the hardest victory of the year. Eisan caught a pass from Lom to score. Merle Hufford '32, Husky halfback, again was the shining light on his team, Holding Stanford and California to single touchdown scores

Lom to score. Merie Hufford '32, Husky halfback, again was the shining light on his team, Holding Stanford and California to single touchdown scores on successive Saturdays indicated that the Huskies are strong.

Washington, defeated or tied in every Conference game, may yet achieve distinction out of the Conference against Professor Stagg's menstanford was defeated Saturday by Santa Clara, the second time in three years this small non-Conference collegé has fooled the Cardinals. Coach G. S. Warner thought Santa Clara was a second and third team job, but when a touchdown was scored in the first few moments he sent in the regulars. Nevertheless. Santa Clara won 13 to 7. Stanford getting its lone score on a pass from Herbert Fleishhacker Jr. 30, fullback, to H. P. Rothert '30, halfback.

New Tricks Expected Coach Warner has a fine team and at every big game introduces some new tricks. Warner's team has made good use of the laterad pass this year with H. P. Rothert '30, fleet halfback. making some fine runs. Stanford has a few surprise players whose appearance has been awaited. William Simkins '30, hero of the Army game last year, and R. A. year, and R. A. Riniala 31, a racing model halfback, are about due for an appearance.

Oregon and Washington State are tied, four won and one lost, for northern division honors. Washington State experienced more difficulty than Oregon winning its last start although opinion was the Oregonians had the harder assignment. Montana's sophomore team appears to have arrived. It outpassed and outscrimmaged the Cougars, but Washington State won 13 to 0, both touchdowns being registered by E. L. Schwartz 30, fullback, which boosts his lead as the front scorer in the Conference. C. A. Ellingsen 31, and A. M. Buckley 30, fleet backs, again starred for the Cougars while the passing of J. S. Morrow 30, Montana quarter, was a source of constant worry to the Washington Staters. Oregon's terrific power attack overwhelmed Oregon State, 16 to 0. Oregon, however, paid dearly for the victory and the Hawaii game may see the Oregon team minus the fine playing of J. W. Kitzmiller 31, quarterback.

Washington State may have a difficult time with Gonzaga at Spokane Saturday. The team of R. L. Mathews, who coached Idaho's first coast Conference eleven, defeated Idaho, 20 to 14. They trailed upstairs and searched through book after book, and at last the little lady pounced on a style.
"There!" she said, delightedly.
"How do you like that?"

'Very much, for someone tall and slim," answered Margaret Joan, her heart sinking.

Mrs. Bainbridge eyed it critically. "Yes," she said, "I will certainly choose this one."

It was calamitous to think of, but when the girl tried to dissuade her, Mrs. Bainbridge said, "If you like it, it must be all right."

Margaret Joan said very little on the way home, for she was feeling quite distressed at the result of the afternoon's shopping. Perhaps I could help matters if I offered to make it up, she thought. But when she suggested it Mrs. Bainbridge answered promptly that she was going to manage the whole thing herself, adding that she knew exactly what she wanted.

At Long Range

On the following Saturday, with their knapsacks filled with blankets and food to last until the next Monday morning, and their lights carefully packed, the trio set out for the woods. Swinging joyously along, the boys thought eagerly of the signaling they were to do that night. Long range signaling had to be done at night, because, as Mr. Appleby had told them, the lights would not show up well in the daylight at a long distance. It was a busy day for all three, as they scurried about finding vantage points from which to work. Night came at last and found the boys on one hill and Don's uncle on another, one travels by train or automobile or on foot he has always the sense decidedly different. Poets and horses go well together and always have—a fact so well known that I need not quots either the ancient myth of Pegasus or the works of Robert of missing something highly important that is going on in another No one, so far as this essayist ever learned, failed to see that his fault-finding amounted to whole-hearted praise, but in due course there came to him not so much an adverse criticism as an emendation of what he had said about October travel. His unknown correspondent pointed out that he had neglected to mention the horse as a possible means of getting from place to place, and asserted that horseback riding is the perfect mode of journeying in October.

Pegasus or the works of Robert Browning in proof of it. Essayists, however, have always been pedestrians. They love the slow and sauntering pace and the sense of doing all things with complete independence. They must be perfectly free, when it pleases them, to stand still in the street for a solid hour, as Socrates while pursuing some thought or rumination to its close. A horse would grow restless during such an hour, and would interrupt the flow of mode of journeying in October.

Everyone knows that lovers of horses are almost as lyrical as the devotees of the footpath way, and so it is not surprising that this particular lastingly: "Says I to myself, says I." is not surprising that this particular, lastingly. Says I concept the equestrienne should have expressed there must be no so herself in the following exalted falls but their own. strain: "What greater ecstasy than under you to feel the lithe movement under you to feel the lithe movement of a horse, the pulling on the bit, the pace of eagerness? Instead of looking on at the magnificent procession, you find you become part of it. You keep pace with the rhythm of blazing color.... On you go, your horse and you, trotting, then galloping, to imbibe the spectrum of beauty, the jeweled hillsides, the crisp air, the radiant sunshine. You feel cloaked in royal purple. You see the golden flower, the pre-eminence of the man radiant sunshine. You feel cloaked in royal purple. He of the October travel problem. He knew very well that there are still a few horses left in the world, and he had even bestridden not a few of them here and there, now and then. On one occasion he had ridden for a solid week side by side with a cowboy in the Californian mountains. The fact was that he rather liked horses, though not to the lyrical dehorses, though not to the lyrical deligible. horses, though not to the lyrical de-gree, and yet when he came to con-aristocracy, though essential, is gree, and yet when he came to consider and enumerate the possible means of getting about in October he simply left them out. Why was this? Well, I think it may have been due to some natural indifference, not yet examined or accounted for, of essayists toward equestrianism. This guess is corroborated a little by the fact that I cannot now recall more than one essayist of importance in all literary history who has ridden a horse, and even the one to whom I refer, a contemporary, does not ride on horseback because it is the mode, though I would not imply that they continue on that account. Now it is certain that no true essayist ever begins anything because it is modish; rather, he leaves a number of good things severely alone for no better reason than that they are fashionable. With regard to fashions, he can like and follow only the very old ones, and he would be likely to refer, a contemporary, does not ride old ones, and he would be likely to say that while the riding of horses

Christian Science is teaching many the true method of accomplishtating as it does a full and complete ing the latter task, and it is demonstrating the fact that one may start at any time to correct thought and construct true character. A better understanding of the relationship between God and man in His likeness, and the resultant removal of sickness and sin from the lives of those who are faithful to its teachings, are witnesses today of the truth of Christian Science. The removal of unhappiness from one's experience is often farreaching in its effects, and the ap-pearing of "the beauty of holiness" s as a cheering light to all who behold it.

"The beauty of holiness" was expressed by Christ Jesus at all times and under all circumstances; and because this was his natural habitude he was enabled constantly to bring health and joy and peace into the lives of others. If we but cultivate in our thinking the love of spiritual beauty, we too can realize for ourselves and others joy and peace and healing; and the greater the apparent difficulties, the more abundant will be the blessing to ourselves and others. We may daily realize our divine right to experience that which is beautiful and free from all evil.

A stanza of a familiar hymn inspiringly declares:

"The heavens declare the glory Of Him who made all things; Each day repeats the story, Each night its tribute brings. To earth's remotest border His mighty power is known; In beauty, grandeur, order,

STOCK PRICES DISPLAY SOME IRREGULARITY

Movement Is Narrow and Orderly-Market Closes Strong

COPIRIGHT 1929. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. NEW YORK-Financial markets were somewhat mixed, but gave more encouragement to the constructive side than to the pessimistic. Cotton sold off on the bullish government ginning to have discounted the report. Wheat was buoyant. Under the influence of easy money, the bond market broadened out, but there was some irregularity in priors.

ened out, but there was some irregularity in prices.

Stocks met profit-taking from the start but it was so well absorbed during the first two hours that in the final trading, with the help of lower call money and expectation of a sharp drop in brokers' loans and a reduction in the discount rate, the market rallied briskly. Each selling test which the market undergoes without givlied briskly. Each selling test which the market undergoes without giving much ground does, of course, strengthen confidence.

While there is still a large body of opinion which holds that no great haste need be made to buy stocks, the period of declining prices is receding into the distance. Closing prices today were near the best. Volume was smaller at well below 3,000,000 shares.

Cheaper Money Policy
So far as the money market is concerned, a further reduction in the New York Federal Reserve Bank's discount rate is logical, especially in view of the avowed cheap money policy now in vogue with the Federal Reserve authorities. The drop in Boston's rate yesterday from 5 to 4½ per cent quite likely will be followed by reductions in other cities as soon as further repayments of discounts are made by mem-ber banks.

ments of discounts are made by member banks.

At present the large amount of outof-town money in New York is proving to be somewhat of an embarrassment, and no doubt Federal Reserve ment, and no doubt Federal Reserve Banks would prefer to see it return home and be used to reduce member bank borrowings. A lower rate at New York would help to accomplish that. Another barrier to a lower rate here was removed this morning when the Bank of England ordered another cut in its discount rate to 5½ per cent. A spread of 2 per cent between New York and London would, it was feared, precipitate a heavy gold movement to precipitate a heavy gold movement to Europe, but a 4½ per cent discount rate here now would merely restore the present spread, which has not been attended with gold shipments. The Street's first interpretation of the lower Bank of England rate was that London expected another decline here.

Bank of England Position

Although the Bank of England's gold holdings are still near the lowest point at which it is judged they should be allowed to fall, recently the bank has been able to buy open market gold, and last week its holdings rose by about $1,000,000.

Meanwhile the banks' reserve ratio has risen to 33.50 per cent, as compared with 29.73 per cent on Sept. 26, when the discount rate advanced from soon, if not immediately

London expected another decline here,

pared with 29.73 per cent on Sept. 26, when the discount rate advanced from 5½ to 6½ per cent. Sterling and other foreign exchanges were strong today, in spite of the reduction in the London bank rate. That may be interpreted as London's guess that a comparable reduction will take place here.

Call money today renewed at 5 per cent and again declined to 4½ per cent around noon. Money was plentiful outside the exchange at 3 per cent, and the time money market is merely a nominal one. The attempt of some dealers to establish a 3¾ asking rate for 90-day bills has not been entirely successful, but the bill rate is nevertheless below 4 per cent, as against a theless below 4 per cent, as against a 4½ per cent discount rate.

High-Priced Railroads High-Priced Rallroads
High-priced rails are looking up.
Rather sharp advances have been scored in the group in the last few days. Some of them lost from 50 to 100 points during the smash, but few dropped to such high yields as were to be found here and there among the industrials

Although the gains in earnings over last year are likely to be less marked in the remaining part of this year, the leading roads are nevertheless enjoying record-breaking earnings. Such roads as Atchison, Union Pacific, Norfolk & Western, New York Central and Chesapeake & Ohio will show much larger earnings per share than comparable industrials.

It will take a considerable business depression to raise any question of a

It will take a considerable business depression to raise any question of a reduction in dividends. On the contrary, some increases are in prospect. Many of the stronger roads now pay out less than 50 per cent of earnings to their stockholders. A fillip is given the rail market by the feeling that the cause of mergers will be helped by the break in stocks.

Short-Term Investments
Money seeking short-term investment is termed by some bankers substantially in excess of demand. With an overcrowded call money market, and with a disinclination of brokers to borrow time money, banks and others with idle funds, which it is not desired to put into bonds, are rather hard put to find suitable short-term investments, giving satisfactory yields.

The point is made that a strong market for public utility operating companies might very easily get under way. The sharp rise of these streks earlier in the year was due in large measure to mopping up the floating supply by holding companies, investment trusts, trading corporations and the like. Short-Term Investments ment trusts, trading corporations and the like.

On the decline it is altogether probable that holding companies have increased their purchases of subsidiary companies stocks simultaneously with a reduction in margin holdings by the public. Such a removal of stocks from the market would make the remaining stock more susceptible than ever to buying stimulants.

Although only a laborious and time-consuming calculation will disclose the actual depreciation in the market value of stocks during the break, the stock exchange's compilation of the value of listed stocks as of Nov. 1 gives a good clue to the total.

EASY SAFETY IS BETTER THAN EASY MONEY

While there may be dozens of roads to "easy money," there is only one way to easy safety. That way is by expert diversification of risk. It is the method always used by banks, insurance compan-ies and wealthy investors.

Thousands of careful investors have secured expert diversification by investing in Federated Capital Corporation. They have had the law of aver-ages working for them through the market fluc-tuations providing safety and continued growth.

As a safe and timely vehicle of profitable investment Federated Capital is worth your serious examination

Who: KATE GREENAWAY.

Where: England.

When: Nineteenth century.

Why famous: An English artist and Greenaway, a draftsman and en- estimated to be 6000 years old. 1868. Thereafter, from time to time, she placed her illustrations on public view, and official recognition of her achievements came in the form of membership in the Royal Institute of Painters in Water Color. But her skill as an illustrator of children's books has carried her fame around the world. Ruskin praised her work; so did distinguished critics of other lands.

These entrancing illustrations appopular. And each year, with one exception, from 1883 to 1897, were issued the Kate Greenaway Almaissued the Kate Greenaway Alma-nacs, now so sought after by collec-naces, now so sought after by collec-tors. The artist illustrated an editors. The artist illustrated an edition of the Pied Piper of Hamelin, but she preferred to illustrate her own texts. To know Miss Greenaway was as delightful an experience as the most extravagant of her admirers could have hoped. A happy, charming person she was, very shy of pub-lic attention.

Miss Greenaway's illustrations being ageless, genuine pleasure may always be had from an examination of them. They are full of a delicate and a fanciful grace. Exquisite little figures in frilled costumes and poke bonnets of the early nineteenth century; the most alluring of back-grounds, prim houses lining primmer streets and squares; daintiest colorings of gray-green and rose and yellow. Everybody loved these pictures; everybody still does. It was said in Kate Greenaway's own time that she "dressed the children of two continents."

A Word a Day

Neophyte A neophyte is a novice, a tyro, a beginner in anything. In the days of the early Christian church, however, the word was applied especially to a new convert. The word comes to us from the Greek νεόφυτος (neophytos), meaning literally "newly planted," from vs6; (neos), "new," and φυτός (phytos), "grown"—q'estv (phyein), "to grow." While "neophyte," "proselyte," and "convert" are all related in the sense that they designate those who make their entrance into new ranks, more especially of religion, yet each has its particular shade of meaning. A convert—the strongest term—is one who turns earnestly to a new doctrine; the proselyte may be an acquisition to the ranks in externals only; the neophyte is simply a newcomer. Ne'-o-phyte is accented on the first syllable and is pronounced as though spelled ne'-o-fit, in which the e is as in eye, o as in obey, i as in ice.

"The college fraternity initiated several neophytes." Note: Webster's first choice is ac-epted as authority for pronunciation.—Ed

Stalin Tosses Another Overboard

THE expulsion of Nikolai Ivanovich Bukharin from the political bureau of the Communist Party has profound significance for Russia and the world. From the Communist standpoint his is a distinguished career. In contrast to Trotzky, he has always been considered orthodox-until lately. As far back as 1906, a mere lad of eighteen, he joined the party and became a leader in secret revolutionary student organizations. He also was successful in organizing strikes, both in Moscow and Petrograd. As a result he was chosen to the important Moscow committee of the party at twenty years of age. In 1910 he was arrested and exiled to Siberia, but escaped abroad, where he remained until the revolution of 1917. He lived in Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Norway, Sweden and America. In the course of his travels he came to know Lenine intimately and was considered one of his most brilliant pupils. Immediately after his return to Russia following the March revolution he became editor of several of the Bolshevist papers. During the same year he was elected a member of the central committee of the party.

No doubt his most important claim to renown is due to his editorship of Pravda, the official newspaper of the Communist Party, and to the fact that he succeeded Zinovieff as head of the Communist Internationale. He is author of what to the Bolshevist mentality are notable volumes, ranking him as the chief theoretician of the party. They include "The Crisis of Capitalism and the Communist Movement," "World Economy and Imperialism," "The Proletarian Revolution and Culture," "The Theory of Historical Materialism" and "A B C of Com-

Bukharin's downfall has its humorous side. He who anathematized Zinovieff and Trotzky is now himself anathema. He who directed worldwide propaganda is himself the victim of it. Then again, what becomes of Communist theory when its chief philosopher is officially declared bankrupt of authority?

Bukharin is now out of Pravda, out of the Communist Internationale and out of the Political Bureau-completely shorn of power. His humiliation is a further index of the concentration of power in the hands of the dictator, Stalin, who has gradually been antagonizing and expelling one after another of the old guard. First it was Trotzky, then Zinovieff, Kameneff, Radek and a host of others. Finally Tomsky and Rykoff fell from grace, although not from office. Today Bukharin is tossed overboard. Stalin remains in complete control of party and state.

There is nothing remarkable in the methods used; politicians the world over know them. Stalin is an opportunist, a middle-of-the-road man, who plays one revolutionist against another, always to the advancement of Stalin. On any moot point he can rely on winning support from the central committee of the party. He is now so powerful that it is doubtful if any group longer dares oppose him.

The expulsion of Bukharin has significance as an indication of the decline of the Communist Internationale. Stalin is a firm believer in rebuilding economic stability, in establishing an industrial nation, in demonstrating Communism in Russia, minimizing for the present its efforts at revolutionizing the world. To this extent the displacement of Bukharin is of importance to other countries.

More Ford Help for the Farm

TRS. HENRY FORD'S exhibition before the Women's National Farm and Garden Association of the model roadside stand for the sale of farm produce should not be hid under a bushel. The stand is described as being "made of old boards and whitewash, and so cheap that no farmer can say he cannot afford it," and thoughtful farmers are perhaps even now looking over their old boards in preparation for another summer.

As motorists multiply, so does the farmer's opportunity to do a roadside business under the pleasing slogan, "Fresh From the Farm." The movement, now spreading throughout the country, to protect rural and suburban landscape against a growing disfigurement by roadside enterprises will also be helped by Mrs. Ford's device of old boards and whitewash, and it appears to be generally accepted that an honest farmer thus selling his honest vegetables is well within his constitutional rights and secure from interruption. The roadside stands whose presence is stirring communities to action for the prevention of more and more of them are, one might say, the stands that bark. Concerning these, a planning-board poet has written in a fine frenzy:

> One swallow does not make a spring. One roadside stand is not a string. But that one stand, it is a hunch Will soon be followed by a bunch

But there is no doubt that the farmer, broadly speaking, could improve his method of display; and that by so doing he would increase his sales. He may well and wisely preoccupy himself during the winter with thought of Mrs. Ford's model stand. His intentions, however, must comport with its rugged sincerity. On such a stand vegetables fresh from the farm will compose their betray the vegetable whose complexion is no longer fresh.

Mr. Ford has done much to help the farmer transport his produce. It is interesting to see Mrs. Ford doing something to help him sell it at home.

The President and Business

ONFIDENCE in the business situation in the , United States, and a thorough conviction that nothing in the line of commercial or industrial depression is going to follow the stock market panic, are expressed by leaders of American industry in the series of telegrams to The Christian Science Monitor which has been appearing during the last three days. It may well be doubted whether a more general expression of business optimism gathered from so eminent a list of representatives of big business has ever been published. And the tone of each and all of these messages is that the United States in its industrial, financial and commercial conditions is impregnable to any assault.

The losses sustained by many people in the collapse in Wall Street are recognized and deplored. And yet these heads of great corporations unite in describing the numbers of such victims as negligible in comparison to the vast size of the American home market, and in laying emphasis upon the fact that speculation and business are entirely distinct activities. As Dr. Klein of the Department of Commerce justly declares: "The stock market is not the principal barometer of business." And he lays emphasis upon President Hoover's statement that "the fundamental business of the country—that is, production and distribution of commodities-is on a sound and prosperous basis." These are the expressions of public men greatly concerned with national prosperity and in a position to observe it in all its phases. The Monitor's symposium of business opinion demonstrates the fact that the leaders of industrial concerns hold opinions identical with those of the President and the Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

Nevertheless, President Hoover has promptly taken steps to give assurance that the conditions resulting from the Wall Street disaster shall not result in limiting employment or industry generally throughout the country. His summons this week to the White House of the responsible heads of the great railroad systems, and his request that they undertake at once the fullest line of building and extension work, is in absolute accord with the promises he made during his campaign. It is the initiation of that policy of so distributing the work of great corporations as to make their activities greatest during the periods when business depression is threatened. The railroads have responded cheerfully to the President's summons, and the amounts which they declare will be expended by them in construction work in the next year are estimated at a billion dollars.

The example thus set has been most commendably followed by the Mayor of New York City, Mr. Walker, who has called together his heads of departments and outlined a public works program also involving the expenditure of a billion dollars, which he urges should be pressed during the coming year. The United States Government will likewise expedite its public building construction. The President proposes following up the conference of railroad heads as speedily as may be by similar efforts to enlist other great industrial concerns in the task of carrying on construction work and extending the field of employment in every possible way. Beyond doubt the influence of the Administration in this direction will be widely felt. As a factor in allaying any mental unrest on the part of the public, caused by the stock panic, its value will be inestimable.

The public is watching the activities of President Hoover in this direction with interest and with sympathy. He was selected for the Presidency because of the wide belief of the American people that he possessed exactly the intellectual qualities that would enable him to cope with just such a situation as now confronts the country. Already he has manifested an alertness to conditions, and a readiness to undertake the task, which justify the confidence which the people reposed in him.

Revising Long-Forgotten Laws

THE British Government has appointed a strong committee under Sir Thomas Inskip, former Attorney-General, on which the Church of England, Nonconformists, and politicians are alike represented, to go into the whole question of the state of the law-reminiscent of the days of John Bunyan-which allowed John Henry Stevens, a Cambridgeshire landowner, to be sent to prison last July, by order of a consistory (ecclesiastical) court, for refusing to repair a church as required by the old deeds of land he had purchased. After being in prison eight days, the accused was released under an order made by the ecclesiastical authorities on his paying £50 and "costs" (legal expenses).

The case has attracted much attention in England as indicating the need for revising longforgotten statutes which, however suitable they may have been in conditions existing hundreds of years ago, are quite inappropriate to those of modern times. The objection taken is not so much because of any impropriety in the infliction of the penalty of imprisonment—supposing a breach of contract to have occurred and to have been persisted in—as because the tribunal which tried the case was a purely ecclesiastical one, whereas it is clearly expedient that disputes involving property should be settled in the ordinary courts of justice.

A Technique for Radio Debates

THE recent radio discussion of "The English Character" between Salvador de Madariaga and André Maurois, with Desmond Mac-Carthy as interlocutor, showed that this kind of item in the British Broadcasting Company's programs can both give amusement and stimulate thought. In discussions which the British Broadcasting Company has occasionally radiocast it has attempted to preserve a strictly informal atmosphere, hoping thus to convey across the ether something of the light, easy charm of good conversation between intelligent people in own symphony of colors—its very austerity will | congenial surroundings. But experience has shown that the ease and lightness are very difficult to maintain when a definite conclusion has to be reached at a particular time, and that talkers are very rare who can be depended on to deliver impromptu epigrams into the microphone at sufficiently short intervals.

Previous discussions have therefore tended to sag and grow desultory and aimless long before it was time for them to finish. In this latest debate, however, the British Broadcasting Company provided against this danger by installing Mr. MacCarthy as interlocutor, so that, since both Señor de Madariaga and M. Maurois spoke impromptu, the talk preserved its freshness and spontaneity, without running the corresponding risk of breakdown through momentary lack of inspiration, because whenever there was the faintest suggestion of such a collapse, Mr. Mac-Carthy intervened with an opportune and more or less prepared question. The British Broadcasting Company has thus put into operation a valuable technique for radio discussions.

James Melvin Lee

ROM his vantage point as director of New York University's department ism, James Melvin Lee cast an analytical eve over the whole fabric of American newspaperdom. After ten years of preparation in extraordinarily varied newspaper offices, Dr. Lee came to New York University in 1910—a pioneer in the teaching of journalism. From then on his influence was strongly manifest, not only in the university lecture halls where the methods of journalism were being weighed, measured, and finally taught, but in the thick and press of city rooms and editorial offices as well.

Dr. Lee and his colleagues in forward-looking universities in other parts of America were able to obtain locus standi for the journalism school within the profession, and working out from this as a base convinced newspaper men that after all there were ethics in the profession which might be codified and guarded in the quiet of academic halls. How right they were is becoming increasingly apparent. Now, as radiocasting and television begin to encroach upon what had been an exclusively newspaper field, leaders in the profession are foreseeing that broader culture, better preparation, and truly incisive authority on the part of working press men are needed to guarantee the place of the newspaper in a changing world. In furnishing this background, Dr. Lee helped to begin a tremendously significant work, and surely as the years go by his services will be gratefully remembered in a newspaper hall of service. His was always an influence for constructive and responsible journalism.

A Magic Carpet for Children

As REGULARLY as autumn's equinoctial booksellers and publishers of Children's Book Week. Not that there is any logical connection between the two phenomena, unless it be the spectacle of the ordinary citizen tipping back his dripping umbrella while he presses close to a shop window crowded with alluring children's books. Perhaps noticing also an accompanying poster, he reflects with gratification that there must still be plenty of children willing to stay away from the motion picture theaters, sprawl upon their own hearth rugs and read—that is to say, provided such a sacrifice is made worth their while. Then, with intent to help along the good work, the ordinary citizen enters the shop and, in the process of selecting just one fairy story for just one youthful acquaintance, rediscovers his own childhood.

Never since John Newbery began to publish books for children at the Sign of the Bible and Sun, in St. Paul's Churchyard, during the reign of George III, have so bewilderingly many of them been offered in one literary season. A few years ago that season was counted fortunate which welcomed one really excellent picture book, whereas this present season boasts at least twenty-five. As to the corresponding improvement in the quality of text and illustrations, words are feeble things to expatiate upon present splendors. At last it is recognized that children not only deserve, but appreciate the

Meanwhile perhaps the most arresting fact about the new books is their quality of worldwideness. Both writers and publishers were of course powerless to foresee the visit of a British Prime Minister to the United States; they could not know how steadfastly would present expectations be focused upon that vision of a world consciousness which must result in world peace. Yet, miraculously, the new juveniles reflect this identical vision, seeming calculated to put the American child en rapport with children in Poland, Hungary, Germany or Czechoslovakia. Here, if you will, is the legendary magic carpet turned practical.

Editorial Notes

The problem of the tramp still baffles Britain. Many solutions are offered. J. T. Gibbons, founder of the Wayfarers Benevolent Association, wants him treated with more respect. "Ask him in," he says, "and give him a meal at the table and friendly words." His advice is born of charity. In putting it into practice, however, there is need of making sure that encouragement is not given to vagrancy.

It has been said that true poetry comes to a man only occasionally. It might be added that many do not recognize it when it does come. We know a man who, while he would probably scoff at being called a poet, likened a white birch, seen against a gray November sky, to a "chalky finger brushed across a blackboard."

When a fir tree estimated to be 800 years old was encountered in the path of a new highway in the State of Washington, the road builders split the road in each direction around the tree. That represents true appreciation of the right-

Home Is Whereat?

"T A-DE-DA! La-de-da!" Serena sang in marching tempo as she stomped up the steps at the rear of the house, and grasped the handle of the back door. "Ump! De-DE-de-de, la-de-da!" The way she whipped open the door made one suddenly conscious of comparatively frail construction of modern dwellings. "La-de-da! La-de-da!" Slight earthquake tremors warned of dancing in the entry.
"Mornin', honey!" The door flung aside, and Serena's jovial bulk swept in. Suddenly the kitchen and house were flowing over with the forces of life and laughter

'Good morning, Serena! It's a lovely day, isn't it?" "Yes'm!" she was all fun, "a good-for-nuttin' day, suah

"Good for nothing?"

A gale of giggles proclaimed that the victim had fallen into the trap. Demurely she made it clear. "Oh, no'm. Good for nuttin', fo' gettin' nuts out in th' hills.'

"Oh, yes, indeed. A lot of old chestnuts, I suppose!" "Well," she appreciated our little joke to the utmost, "ol' o' new, I knows a man an' lil' feller whut's out th' aft' 'em 'smornin'."

"I has," her eyes were moist with mirth or some other emotion, "a c'numdrum 'bout 'em to asks yo'."
"M-hm? A conundrum?"

"Yes'm. I asks yo', whe'eat is home?"

"Why, er, they say-Serena chuckled and interrupted, "Yo' don' need think whut they says in books, 'cause this ain't outa a book. This's my own c'numdrum. Maybe ifn' I was t' tell yo' my 'sperience wi' th' man an' lil' feller, yo' could guess th' answer. But lawsy, we ain't got time fo' such foolishment as varnin', now has we, honey." She turned deter-

"Oh, but how will I know about it if you don't tell

Earnestly and very obviously Serena mastered her reluctance to tell the tale, and then ruined the act by bursting into delighted laughter.

"Ifn' yo' 'sist, I does," she acquiesced.
"Does y' 'member," she began, "how my boy, Jim, he'ps Bro' Clew wi' th' lil' fellers up t' th' chu'ch? He do, an' they likes my boy, Jim, lots. He's real int'rested in 'em.

Learnin' 'em t' bang one anothe' with a football now.
"Well, one day 'bout a month ago, Jim, he comes home f'om playin' all down in a mouf an' dirty. One's 's bad's tothe'! I jus' wanted t' put 'im in a tub, clo'es an' all. So I says, 'Yo' git outa them things an' give 'em t' me, an' go wash up yo'self.' Big man whut he is, he do it like he was still my lil' boy, an' back he comes in his swell an' gorgeous baf robe. M'mph! Yo' should see them red an' blue an' purple stripeses!"

Serena sighed gusty pleasure in this radiant raiment before she returned to her narration.

"He sits on a arm of a chair, aswingin' a leg, an' finally he says, sad, 'Oh, ma!' An' again, 'Oh, ma!' An' then it comes out that one o' th' lil' fellers, Georgie Lee, has been orphanated sudden.

'Jim, he walks up an' down, all upset. 'He ain't got no relations, ma,' he says, 'an' they is talkin' o' puttin' im wi' that ol' skinflint, Rast', who'd jus' as soon wuk 'im t' a frazzle t' earn 'is keep. They say, "Who else wunts a hungry, nine-year-ol' boy?" It ain't right, ma; he's plumb full o' music, an' sings great, an' oughta be where he's gettin' some he'p an' trainin'.' goes on washin' out Jim's things, an' he goes on walkin', till at las' he says: 'Ma, cain't yo' do suthin'?'

"I rinches an' wrings, an' then I says: 'I'll go an' see. Jim he leapfrogs ove' a chair an' hugs me like eve'ythin'

"So the nex' thing we is ove' t' where Georgie done live, an' the' is a big crowd o' folks buzzin' an' millin'. I looks 'roun an' the' is lil' Georgie standin' by hisself, dull-lookin' out th' windo', bitin' his lip an' tryin' t' fin' his hankie in all his pockets.

"I gits near an' han's 'im a hankie sly, an' then I goes ove' whe' Bro' Rast' is argyfyin' an' lissens. He are sayin' how o' cou'se a lil' feller like Georgie ain't much good, but he is willin' he should wuk in his 'baccy sto' an' sell papers, an' do othe' jobs. 'Maybe he do like music, but we gotta be practical 'bout this, we is,' he says, an' glares "He is 'sprised when I 'grees. 'Them's wise words yo' utters 'bout bein' practical, Bro' Rast'. An' since Georgie heah won' be much good t' wuk fo' a few days, supposin' I takes 'im an' feeds 'im up, an' men's his clo'es. Does yo'low tha's practical?' They is all please', an' we goes back home wi' Georgie. "Th' tears is beginnin' t' come, so when we is home, I sets down an' takes im on my lap. 'Theah, theah, honey!'

I says, an' he th'ows 'is arms 'roun' my neck an' cries: 'Oh, Mis' Booker, nobody done want me no mo'. I ain't no good fo' nuthin'!"

"Sh! honey, 'tain't so!' I says. "The Lord musta' needed yo', o' He wouldn' 've made yo'.'

"We rocks back an' fo'th, an' I starts thinkin' how it looks like Georgie needs a home, an' how nice a home is, an' how Jim, an' John, an' Luelly, an' me is he'pin' an' lovin' one anothe'. Then somehow my min' runs on, an' thinks o' po', lone Mist' Walker in ouah chu'ch, how he was in the War, an' things made 'im bitter, an' how his gal done run away f'om 'im, an' how he jus' kep' to hisself mo' an' mo', an' how he made lotsa money, an' then ifn' folks spoke nice to 'im, he says to hisself: 'They is aft' my money, they is.' 'His house suah is no home,' I goes on, thinkin' out loud.

"'Po' man,' I says to Georgie. 'He's bad off, wi' nobody t' hearten 'im up. Almos' nobody can, he won' let 'em. 'Po' man,' says Georgie, shakin' his head, 'cain't nobody?' "

Serena beamed like a big summer sun. "Right then a idea pops in f'om somewhe'es. Ain't it funny 'bout ideas? One minute yo' don' see 'em, an' th' nex' they is twinklin'."

She was greatly amused at this conceit, but shortly went on: "I grabs Georgie, an' sets 'im on his feet. 'Maybe,' I says, 'they can, maybe yo' can. Maybe yo' is th' only one in th' worl' who can, an' it's whut yo' was made fo'. Is yo' willin' t' go an' try t' hearten up po' Mist Walker, bring 'im fun an' love?"

"Georgie's eyes was shinin',"—so were Serena's and someone else's—"an' he says, 'Yes, does Mist' Walker really need 'im?' I tol' 'im he did, awful bad, too. We is laughin' an' cryin' wi' happiness, an' befo' I could get on t' whut he was doin', Georgie runs t' th' do' an' is out. When I comes to, I rushes aft' an' yells, 'Come back, an'

et me wash th' tears off yo' face! But he was gone.' Serena laughed as if at her own folly. "Wasn' it good I didn' get no chance t' wash them tears, 'cause they foun' th' way t' Mist' Walker. So Mist' Walker an' Georgie is togethe' now, an' today they is out nuttin'.

humor with which she had arrived. "Maybe yo' knows th' answer t' th' c'numdrum, whe'eat is home?"
"I guess home is where the beautiful in the short of the short

"I guess home is where the heartening is."
"Yo' is at th' head o' th' class, honey," Serena judged joyously, and was immediately compelled by our next remark to change her opinion.

"It was splendid that Georgie found a home." Serena cocked her head questioningly. "Him? But yo' see it was really Mist' Walker whut needed a home, needed th' heartenin'. Tha's howcome it wuked that way. Soft, musical chuckles admonished her audience. "Yo' mus' be mo' practical 'bout things," she said.

"Turkestan, Teheran, Tabriz"

To THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

I read with interest the intriguing editorial, "Stambul, Singapore, Samarkand!" which appeared on October 2 in The Christian Science Monitor, I also read the exceedingly interesting reply, "Armchair Journeying," by H. W. M.; the Texas letter offering "Rio, Rizal, Riga," and the letter from California suggesting "Scutari, Stromboli and Shalimar." I, too, have been "armchair journeying." May I suggest the following?

Turkestan, Teheran, Tabriz. These things have I garnered from the Harvest Fields of Turkestan-The throbbing beauty of camel bells in the silvered glamour of desert moonlight.

Teheran—The pale pink roses that blow in the garden of the Shah.

Tabriz—The Blue Mosque. I do not know the author of the following exquisite wisp of poetry, but it is so lovely that I am copying it down:

Sweet to ride forth at evening from the wells, When shadows pass gigantic on the sand And softly through the silence beat the bells Along the Golden Road to Samarkand. The Golden Road! The dark shadows of a caravan patterning a moving design of jet on the desert sands! Camel bells ringing silver-clear in the argent witchery of East-

Oh, Samarkand the Golden! Samarkand, does the fragrance of crushed violet-colored and jade-hued grapes haunt the Oriental loveliness of your streets, your market place, your bazaars? FELICITAS CARMAN. Abington, Mass.

Mr. Galsworthy and Trader Horn TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

Would you do me the courtesy of allowing me to correct a statement concerning the Horn books which appeared in the Monitor of August 28, now just arrived in South

In an article under a Vienna date line reporting the annual meeting of the P. E. N. (the literary international club started by Mr. Galsworthy) I read:

Mr. Galsworthy's association with the P. E. N. is another example of his judgment and spirit of helpfulness. One thinks at once of Ethelreda Lewis smarting under the disappointment of the return of the "Trader Horn" MS. from the publishers. A kindly word of appreciation from Mr. Galsworthy changed that temporary failure into an immense success. The facts are that when Mr. Galsworthy, so fortunately for the Horn books, turned up in South Africa on a visit, the cepted six weeks before by Jonathan Cape in London, Mr. Cape, so he has told me, is very proud of the fact that he had accepted the book (on the advice of Edward Garnett, his reader) before we had the great good fortune to be befriended by Mr. Galsworthy.

It is true that, previous to its acceptance by Cape, the MS. had been refused by my first publishers; but not under circumstances that made me smart. On the contrary, I re joiced to get away so easily from an unsuitable publisher to the one I most desired for the Horn books.

The circumstances were that after publishing three novels of mine, my first London publishers-a well-known and long-established firm, but with at that time rather unprogressive ideas of advertising, format, etc.-asked me for a fourth novel before signing the contract for number three. I replied that I did not intend to publish another novel with them, as I felt that my books being trampled and hidden under their thundering herd of best sellers. I added, however, that in order to show my good will I would let them have the first option on a very peculiar book I was editing, which would be far more valuable to them than any novel of mine could ever be But I also stated that I would only do this on condition that they agreed to every clause of a little special contract I was drawing up concerning the book's format and advertising. It needed, I said, that individual advertising which their books had never had, and very particular care in its printing and binding.

I then sent the MS. and letter off via my agent in London, instructing the agent that as soon as the book was returned, which I hoped it would be, after having done off to Jonathan Cape's. As I had half anticipated, the MS. was returned very quickly with the reader's comment that he did not consider it worth publication. It was sent at once to Cape's, who accepted it by cable within a month, it being then Christmas, 1926. In the meantime I had been making strenuous efforts to get Mr. Chesterton to write a foreword. My idea was that, being a Roman Catholic himself, he might like to interest himself in helping a derelict fellow-churchman Further, that being the sort of man who appreciates, in theory at least, a Bacchanalian sentiment, the joys of the open road, and so on, he would be the very man for the job. But I could not hit my target, although I believe that Mr. Chesterton's secretary did her level best to bring him to a mellow frame of mind.

When Mr. Galsworthy arrived in Cape Town in January. 1927, I still had had no reply. Hence I wrote and told him all about it and how disappointed I was not to interest Mr. Chesterton; I also sent him four chapters to read. And although he is not a Roman Catholic and certainly has not a Bacchanalian muse, he put his hand on the tiller'in a most energetic and determined way. On February 15 he was in Johannesburg discussing the future from 11 points of view, examining contracts and cabling suggestions to Jonathan Cape as to the welfare of the book.

As your correspondent points out, Galsworthy is indeed the very essence of kindness and practical helpfulness. Hence his great interest in the P. E. N. Club, which keeps him in touch with many foreign writers who, but for him, might never meet their kind in friendly intercourse Johannesburg, S. Af. ETHELREDA LEWIS.

Rehabilitation of the Criminal TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

The rehabilitation of the criminal affords more protection to society than his punishment. Yet millions upon millions of dollars are expended upon the punitive sys tem, and practically nothing for the rehabilitation. Crime in the United States is a disgrace to the country.

In England crime is decreasing. Jails are being torn down. In the United States crime is alarmingly on the increase, and immense sums of money are devoted to building new jails. There must be some reason other than the difference in the make-up of the population. Primarily the system of administrating the laws is very different in the two countries. Give to America the common-sense way of dealing with crime that obtains in England, and America could also néglect the rehabilitation of the criminal as of no consequence save the humanity involved. England can afford to neglect this, but in the United States it is of vital importance.

Out of a certain mob of thieves of about 125, only about thirty are confined at any one time. About 80 per cent is free to plunder as it pleases. Would England stand for that? A hearty "No" is the answer. Every one of these 125 is eager and anxious to become industrialized under the system of the Marshall Stillman Movement. We know, for we have one of their leaders in our employ.

This mob can be cleaned up, and every other criminal mob of the large cities of the country can be industrialized if the problem is tackled right. We know, because we have been studying this problem from inside the dens of the underworld for the last fifteen years. These boys don't ask for charity. They ask for a chance. Let society give some of its investment money into the keeping of men of wellknown ability and integrity, and employ these 100,000 criminals throughout the country who are now preying upon business and the people, and crime will be reduced to a small matter.

This is the common-sense way of tackling this question. There is material of high, potential mechanical value in the underworld that the commonwealth is throwing upon the scrap heap. Let's salvage this element and rid America of the stigma of crime.

Men are coming out of prison with absolutely nowhere to go. They get ten dollars and the caution not to spend it foolishly, and with a "God bless you" they are sent on their way. The poor fellows try to go straight. Not one of them on his first release but makes a firm resolve to re-

Give the criminal a chance to earn a decent living and to give of his services to his pals and the suffering poor of his neighborhood, and the problem of crime is solved.

ALPHEUS GEER Founder of the Marshall Stillman Movement
